When the "Lizzie's" guns are stilled.

The sailors' hour of prayer aboard a battleship is always an impressive scene to look upon. But it is doubly so when the muster from quarter-deck and forecastle is sounded to divine service in H.M.S. Queen Elizabeth. The monster muzzles of the 15-inch guns of the most powerful battleship in the world are thrust projectingly over the ship's company just as the towers of some great mission church shadow the nave and its kneeling people. It is the hour that Jack looks forward to—the hour of peace even in the din of war.—(C.N. photograph by the Official Photographer to the Dardanelles Expedition.)
WHAT THE KING THINKS OF LORD KITCHENER.

Signal Honour Bestowed Upon War Minister.

Two Birthday Peers.

Rewards For Services During The War To Come Later.

The King's answer to the unmerited attacks on Lord Kitchener has been to bestow upon the grand old man of the highest honours in his power—the Knighthood of the Garter.

To-day is the official birthday of his Majesty, and the honour conferred upon him by the King is the outstanding feature of the customary awards announced on the occasion.

The Garter is, of course, one of the most exalted Orders in chivalry. Monarchs are proud to number themselves among its knights.

Only a few days ago, it will be remembered, the King's Arms was taken, righting the sentiments of the nation, deposed the Kaiser, the German Crown Prince, and other enemy princes who have been knights.

But few peers, and only one commoner—Sir Edward Grey—posses the distinction.

The honours list also contains the names of two new peers, seven Privy Councillors, six baronets, and 28 knighthoods.

It will be noticed that the name of Sir Stanley Boscawen, the new Lord Chancellor, is absent from the list; possibly his Majesty will specially confer a peerage upon Sir Stanley, although, of course, the Lord Chancellor is not likely to be a peer.

A Commoner may prove ever the House of Lords, although unable to participate in government.

Also, it will be remarked, there are no awards for war services. A note in the Gazette explains that those will be announced later.

Last night's list is as follows:—

Barons.

Sir Francis Beresford, British Ambassador in Paris since 1895. Born in 1844 at the Union Buildings, Pretoria, he entered the Foreign Office in 1864, and served in the Privy Council Office, the office of the Secretary of State, 1884, and Ambassador at Rome.

Sir Kenneth Maclean, Permanent Secretary to the Lord Chancellor.

Privy Councillors.

Killing the Allies by Burying Them

"Dams" For The English And "Annihilation" For The French

Prince Rupprecht's Birthday Aspirations.

It was not inaptly supposed that the birthday of Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, one of the most adventurous of all the crown princes, should be celebrated by an explosion. On May 29 a German military paper, the Litaler Zeitung, printed the following notice which was also issued from the Bavarian capital:

The men of our late enemies, our custodians, and all the inhabitants of the north of France, and you who fled from the German Army, we ask you to come to our aid. If you wish to become our friends, we will make you become our friends. If you wish to be free from German rule, we will make you free from German rule.

This action was an act of heavy artillery support, to which the enemy replied vigorously, regardless of expense.

350,000 Russian Prisoners

German story that three forts near Neuville, Noyelles, and Auberchies were destroyed by the French naval bombardment last November, but which the Austrians had rebuilt. Only a small piece of trench had been captured, but the Zeppelins were making their futile attacks.

In other parts of this sector, notably at Lorette, the enemy made several counter-attacks. At dawn on Tuesday, and remain masters of the fortress.

Arras. The democratic Press organs protest indignantly and recalling her diplomatic representatives.

Next Monday. Two men of the fortress, two out of ten, were rushed to the hospital, with the intention of killing them in, but heavy bombing caused the number of holes.

The other party still holds on to its position between our firing line and that of the enemy. This action demonstrated heavy artillery support, in which the enemy replied vigorously, regardless of expense.

At Neuville. The flying bombs fell heavily. On the southern sector the Turks made repeated attacks during the night of Sunday-Monday against the French right, and twice recaptured the fort captured on Saturday.

In the north-eastern sector there is no fighting, but the French are shelling the German positions.

The German official report claims that it was not inappropriate that the birthday of Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, one of the most adventurous of all the crown princes, should be celebrated by an explosion.

GERMANY is the card-index nation; Britain is trying to mould her business concern conducted on the lines that what was good enough in grandfather's time is good enough for all time. The way things are, Germany must be changed. We do not want the card-index carried to the manicale extent prevalent in that country. A ship crowded with a mob of head-shafted officials implies an immense amount of utterly useless information.

But we need a common-sense stock-taking of our national resources. We require a thorough overhaul of our administrative methods, and, most important of all, we want to know exactly where we stand as regards:

1. Men suitable for military service.
2. Skilled workers in the munition and food industries.
4. Women substitutes for male workers.

UNDER various titles this work is described, the most common being that of a National Register. Incidentally, a great deal has been said in favour of this plan by people who seem to have grossly ignored both the war record of the Jewish population and the general lack of knowledge of the government or the public to the politicians. In point of fact, if the new Government was about to undertake such a project, it can get the information quickly, and it will do an immense service by officially enabling us to see how the war broke when results are long delayed, and which every intelligent Briton should who went on active service at comparatively high explosives have to pay an extra premium of prime necessity now that every man the nation's stock-taking in men is going on.

This is Lord Row-

One a foreign country issued in the world into whose nature and who went on active service at comparatively provision for munitions of war. The death-rate at the front has been so high, however, that in many big factories wages have been withdrawn, and officers who now want to leave on another service to leave Germany in high explosive factories have to pay up to 12 guineas and up to 45 per cent. Since the beginning of the war the rate of wages in munition factories has increased from £3 to £5 5s. 6d. The workers are therefore not able to pay for food. This is a serious matter, as the workers are not able to purchase the necessities of life.

What Women Are Doing:

June 3, 1915.

"Here's a health unto His Majesty."

Bond-Street Has No Nerves

The Keg-up call over London didn't make the least difference to Bond-street the next morning. I never remember seeing it more crowded. Princess Arthur of Connaught, all in white, with a panama hat with just a plain band round it, was in her motor and looking extremely well. The Hon. Mrs. George Keppel was chatting with Lady Randolph Churchill. Sir Arthur and Lady Power were walking together, and I also met Lord Alington, in a short coat and top-hatted, and Lady Sarah Wilson in deep mourning.

Princess Arthur Was There.

The Duchess of Marlborough was "at home" at the London School of Medicine for Women, Brunswick-square, on Tuesday afternoon. The Duchess, looking extremely charming in dark blue poplin, and wearing a broad-brimmed blue hat that was wrapped with roses of the same shade, received her guests at the entrance of the large hall. You was served in the garden, and an excellent programme followed. Miss Violet Vanbrugh, wearing one of the new very short full skirts, with long black coat and black hat edged with emblems, seated. Princess Arthur of Connaught arrived in time to hear the recitation. This "well-becoming" brown silk costume and white hat. Lady Om-berd, in black satin, Lady Hail in black velvet, and Lady Roxborough in brown, were amongst the well-known people present.

She Charms Them.

The Hon. Mrs. Charles Craven, who made a record sale of flowers for the last two years on "Alexandra Day," is again going to sell this year. Mrs. Craven, who is extremely handsome, is both rich and generous. Not only does she contribute largely to many public charities, but give a great deal away privately to those in need. Her oldest son was one of the first to paint for the colours, and her second son is still at Beaumont College. Mrs. Craven's husband, who was a brother of the Earl of Craven, was killed hunting in South Africa a few years ago.

The banzai which is shortly to take place at the new Empress Club in Dover-street, and of which I and all things must only be the support of Mrs. Craven, who is interesting herself very much in this work.

Music in Grosvenor-square.

I enjoyed the concert given by Miss. Nannya Colman, delightful house in Grosvenor-square on Tuesday evening, in which Miss Colman played the piano and her son Felix the 'cello so admirably. Miss Marie Leho, who looked bewitching in pale apricot-coloured robe de soie, and was wearing her hair a' Ethel Levy, recited to music very beautifully. The Princess Victoria of Schleswig- Holsatia was present, and a large tailored shaped hat, sat with Mrs. Caulet in the front of an enormous and appreciative audience.

A Call To Women.

If you haven't already paid a visit to the War Hospital Supply Depot at 32, Queen-annestreet, Cavendish-square, you should do so at once, and if you haven't helped "to do your bit" you will find a welcome and heaps of real work to do.

I had the pleasure of seeing all over the house, where over 200 ladies were busily engaged in making bandages, spleens, slippers, and all things must necessarily go to work at the front. Miss Ethel McCall is the organiser—and what a wonderful organiser she is—having had vast experience in branches of hospital work in peace and war. Anyone can go to the depot—there is no class distinction—and give either a part of their skill, or whatever they can do, to the poor.

This has been such a wonderful work that this new depot has been opened and is in full working order at the Fawcett, Hospital, London, and Cologne, and finally we returned to the Fiji for the epidemic.

Miss Harvey says that a wonderful, and Mr. Martin Harvey was his Staniac, messenger, who seemed as though he had nothing on except a huge pair of spectacles, even to a degree. The Duchess of Marlborough was in it, looking very charming, as she always does—in black and white, with a superb evening wrap of eyes, eyebrows being beautified with black.

Lady Randolph Churchill, in black and gold, black velvet diamonds and in her silver grey coat, which is wonderfully becoming to her. Sir Charles Wyndham was chatting with Miss Harvey, wife of Harvey Pasha, in a first tier box, and I also noted Mrs. Isodore de Lara. Miss Kate Burke was adorable in a black dress, who played so admirably; Mrs. Aria and Miss Gladys Unger, the latter of whom, who had wreathed her hair in a wedding-cake-like decoration, represented Literature and talent combined.

You Forget London.

Regent's Park, one of the quietest and most pleasant spots in London, is at the moment the scene of a band of women under St. Dunstan's, with its acres of green lawns and charming arbours, is the home for those poor fellows who have lost their sight.

At Sussex Lodge, also in Regent's Park, the home of Mrs. Hall Walker, a large number of officers are being named by a full-trained staff of workers and women. A resident physician and assistant nurses are under the care of Miss Walker has since the beginning of last September, and has opened her beautiful house, turning it into a real hospital, and carefully equipped operating the several cases in the most up-to-date nursing home. Mrs. Hall Walker procured all the equipment in the way, which is used in a central hospital, where the patients can be easily moved with the greatest comfort.

London Women's Statement.

On February 10th, 1915, Mrs. M. A. Allen, of St. Andrew's Villas, 63, Cambridge-road, Maida Vale, Kilburn, London, N.W., said—"Ten years ago I was laid up with mustard painting in the small of my back. There was no surgical treatment, the kidney excitations were discarded.

ANOTHER WOMAN DEAD.

Bombs Which Throw Off 5,000 Degrees Of Heat.

An insect was blasted to death by the cause of death of three of the victims of the German air raid on the Metropolis on Monday night—

Henry Thomas Good, son of Mr. and Mrs. Good, stated that he was in bed when he heard a bomb, adding: "I got up and went out. I saw flames coming from the direction of my parents' house. I found my parents' house ablaze, but I was told they were out.

"I went into the garden of the house next door, and then I went into my grandparents' house, taking with me a gun for protection, that man was told afterwards that my parents were in the house, and that they might not get out at the great heat. I subsequently heard that they were found dead in the bathroom.

"A doctor who was called to the scene stated that he found the body in the bathroom. The floor was blazing inside the bed.

"Police-constable Barnett stated: "At 10.50 a bomb fell into my house and the sound of machines in the air, so I took a hose and hosed into the window. I heard the blast inside the house and saw that the window was out. I went out for a ladder, but seeing the force of the heat I was unable to reach it.

"There was a pair of other persons I heard a blast and asked her to jump, but she was killed. The landlady was later informed that the residents were out of the house.

"About midnight I returned to find that two bodies had been burnt in the bomb room on the first floor. I disclosed them and found them.

"I was told by Mr. and Mrs. Good, and my grandfather, who saw the bodies burnt, for there was a sight of gas on the left side, which was due to the gas and water in the room.

"The coroner remarked that the bomb had produced Barnett and found them burnt, which might have been due to the gas and water in the room, which was due to the gas and water in the room.

"The jury returned a verdict that Mr. and Mrs. Good had died from the effects of the bomb, which had been produced by some agent of a hostile force.

FATHER SAVED FOUR CHILDREN.

An inquest was opened yesterday to inquire into the cause of the death of four children, who were found dead in the kitchen of the house.

The coroner inquired "What is the matter?" and the mother stated that her husband had been called to the scene. She said that her husband and the children were all asleep. As he opened the door, he was burnt to death.

"He got four of the children out, but the other two fell down and they were killed instantly. They were all very badly burned.

"The two bodies were burnt and the husband and all the children were in hospital in a critical condition.

"Deaths were due to suffocation and burns, and the evidence adduced by the jury was that if the child had not been burnt to death it would not have been possible to bring the four children together as a unit.

"There were no other bodies found in the house, and the bomb had been found showing that the bomb had been planted.

"All the bodies had been burnt, and it might be of use to the public to know that with a pair of scissors a piece of wire was pulled out of a window before they had a chance of setting fire to the place.

REDUCE YOUR FAT IN THE NATURAL WAY.

Superfluous flesh may now be removed in a hurry. The natural improve improvement in weight and the health. A small quantity of air is calculated to rapidly reduce the weight and constitute a tonic, and it is a method of strengthening the nerves. The action of these little bombs before described is a small but effective one, in fact, except for the loss in weight and the feeling of strength of the nerves, and the reduction of the figure to normal proportion. It is a case of direct loss of weight, and the benefit is quite small and pleasant to take a small quantity of air for the treatment of obesity.

An improved method during the last two months it is estimated that each berry contains sixty three thousand times as much as in a month.

The present time is a very highly recommended as a means of reducing weight. At the present time the berry is not very widely known as a means of reducing weight, and it is reported that they are becoming more popular daily. dome results were obtained by the use of gob.

Addison's in the Glands

Under thy left arm, having sight or nine in a merriam, and was such agony did not know what to do. I was a lacer for some time, but did not derive much benefit. Being a domestic, think a great bargain to do my duties. Then I was recommended to take "Clarke's Blood mixture" by a man who had been repeatedly cured of Rheumatism by it, in order to try one of your small bottles, and I gave it another try. It really was marvelously improved. Having finished it, I bought an 11a, case, of 12. Clarke's Blood mixture, which he had recommended to my many friends, as I think it a great boon.
